The Octopush 'Olly' (Light and Sounds)

The Octopush 'Olly' is a specialist toy for encouraging social interactions, communication, and collaboration through play for children with special educational needs. 'Olly' is a creature-friend and a facilitator of children's communication. It allows to create a level playing field for children with different special needs and encourages peer-to-peer social interactions.

The Octopush 'Olly' is underpinned by research in design for health and education, and its effectiveness was successfully evaluated with children with cerebral palsy at a special needs school in the UK.

The Octopush has four modes:

1. 'Interactive game' mode to practise turn-taking skills and cooperation.
2. 'Sounds mode' for calming and relaxing.
3. 'Sound reactive' cause and effect mode.
4. 'Colour recognition game' mode.

Playing with 'Olly' allows multiple skills to be developed simultaneously. These include:

- Social skills, such as sharing, cooperation, joint attention, visual/sign/speech contact,

- Physical skills, such as fine and gross motor movements, coordination,
- Sensory skills such as tactile, visual and audio,
- Emotional skills, such as understanding positive emotions,
- Cognitive skills, such as knowing colours, counting, understanding consecutive and cause-and-effect actions.

Key characteristics:

- Inter-sensory tactile toy with lights and sounds (without sudden effects or splashes of light),
- Ergonomic and stable (easy to use for children with involuntary movements, poor muscle control, tremors, etc.),
- Inclusive (for children with different special needs),
- With positive and cause & effect feedback,
- Safe (soft, without small and detachable parts, washable),
- Intuitive (no need for instructions from adults).

Sensory Tactile

Tactile sensory stimulation involves the sensation of touch and texture. Children with tactile sensory issues may have difficulty tolerating the sensations generated as they dress or groom themselves, or even as they chew food. Therapists work with tactile-sensitive individuals to desensitise them to unavoidable textures and touch sensations. Exposure to appropriate tactile variation during play can help widen what is acceptable and therefore reduce extreme reactions.

Children will love exploring their surroundings with our fantastic selection of products and ideas aimed at touching, feeling and reaching out to explore the world through colour and texture.

Cuddle Balls

Therapy Putty

Our Therapy Putty is a great way to effectively exercise and strengthen hands. It is ideal for people with arthritis in hands or can also be used for post-surgical exercise. It is lightweight, non-greasy and perfect for people with reduced hand strength. The lightweight, velvety texture is the result of a unique composition that makes it less oily. Therapy putty won't stick to skin or under fingernails, and maintains resistance while pinching and squeezing.

Magna Maze

Help your children nurture some of the key skills needed for effective handwriting

The board contains coloured balls which are moved across the maze under the clear plastic cover using 'pencils'. These 'pencils' have a magnet in their tip, but are held by the child using the same tripod grasp which they would use to hold a regular pencil. The magnet-tipped pencils are used to guide the balls through the maze from the start to the finish.

Sensory Integration Therapy

Designed for sensory stimulation and providing a fun and engaging environment. These products help with improving balance, behaviour, confidence, motor coordination, social skills and refine the senses.

Balance Boards

Balance Boards are used for shaping postural reflexes, with a special focus on equilibrium reaction, background postural reflexes, orienting and defensive responses. Using this Balance Board ensures stimulation of basal sensory systems, facilitating the development and modification of the child's postural reflexes.

Sensis System Set

This large wooden frame is called the SENSIS System. A lot of our products can be attached to it and detached again in order to facilitate as many different exercises as possible. You can pick and choose different models to use with the frame to create your own SENSIS System set. A variety of models designed to work with the sensis system or the frames, easy to attach, remove and swap with alternative models depending upon the sensory exercise you wish to perform. All designed as a fun and interactive way to exercise, developing bilateral motor coordination, balance reflexes, visuomotor coordination, tonic (especially labyrinthine) reflex integration, improving postural (flexor and extensor) muscle tone and general stimulation of the nervous system through strong activation of the vestibular and proprioceptive system receptors.

Sensory Slide

Along with the slide we include a specially mounted line and special pegs, which broadens the functionality of the slide. The slide is used for shaping postural reflexes, with a special focus on equilibrium reactions, background postural reflexes, orienting and defensive responses. Using this equipment ensures stimulation of basal sensory systems, facilitating the development and modification of the child's postural reflexes. The slide can be used in combination with the skateboard in order to stimulate linear movement receptors of the vestibular system. It is especially useful in developing primitive reflexes through strengthening extensor muscles, but also motor planning and some eye reflexes, e.g. convergence.

Writing Slopes

A classroom essential!

Our writing slopes allow children to write at the correct angle. These writing slopes are tough and durable and can be carried easily from classroom to classroom. Some children find writing on a flat surface difficult and it can sometimes lead to development of an incorrect posture and poor motor control. Our writing slopes have a 20 degree angle, which helps to ensure greater comfort and more effective skills development.
